Building a world without NEC

We invite leaders who share our vision of a world without NEC to support the NEC Family Summit.

Families fuel our shared vision of a world without necrotizing enterocolitis. There is no one more invested in advancing NEC research, education, and advocacy than families who have been personally devastated by this disease. By bringing families together in person, we will build the relationships, trust, and strategies to propel our mission.

We are committed to ensuring diverse, inclusive, and equitable representation by welcoming participants across geographic regions, lived experiences, and backgrounds to join.

Families at the NEC Symposium in Chicago

The NEC Family Summit will be an inclusive and collaborative space where families engage, connect, and help lead the future of NEC research, education, and advocacy.

"It's so great to have a stage to tell my son's story, and incredible to be around parents who have gone through what I went through—who understand that pain in a totally different way. And to meet parents who have been able to take their children home and watch them grow, to hear about the challenges and the successes of that. To have different perspectives together has been extremely inspiring."

Nicola Juri, Mom of Ronan, who tragically passed away from NEC, speaking about the NEC Symposium; NEC Society Board Member

Your support will help us:

- Eliminate financial and geographic barriers that may otherwise prevent families from participating in this powerful and meaningful experience
- Elevate family voices in shaping the future of NEC research and care
- Expand education and awareness efforts
- Strengthen advocacy initiatives that drive systemic change
